

Homework Intervention Program

Richardton-Taylor High School

Research has shown that most failing grades are from students not completing homework. For that reason we are implementing this program. This is an incentive for students to have their homework completed on time. Please note that as a school we want every student to learn and are working towards that end, but the students also have to do their part in the learning process. The following is how the program will be implemented in the Richardton-Taylor High School:

Any student in grades 7 – 12 who does not have their homework completed in any class will be required to attend a 5th period class. They will be released for lunch at the 5 min. warning bell and will be given 15 min. to eat. For junior high students they must be in the 5th period class by 12:00 and senior high students must be in class by 12:30. They will have 20 min. to complete their missing assignments during that time. This is a strict class with no talking, wandering, or horseplay. The students are sent here to WORK! Mrs. Hauck will be in charge of the senior high class and Mrs. Messer will be in charge of the junior high class. Senior high and junior high will report to Mrs. Zent's room. Failure to report to the 5th period class once assigned will be considered neglecting obligations on the discipline matrix and will result in a one-hour detention after school. Any other individual who would like to use this time could do so with no consequence.
